What is FDA.COM?

FDA.COM is an internet communications media site that currently enjoys over 200,000 industry professional visitors every month.

FDA.COM provides a Portal type of forum focusing on open dialog and the sharing of professional information through an interactive discussion group environments and direct Questions and Answers (Q&A) responses, delivering immediate streamlined quality information to the industry professionals, by industry leaders (known as Sponsors).

And at the same time allowing industry leaders to promote services and products.

Sponsors are Vendors, Contractors or Professional Services firms, who field technical and compliance issues by the industry. Sponsors currently enjoy the exclusivity of their field or technology sector and by assisting the industry, enables them to stand out as the authoritarian leader of that industry.

FDA.COM is the 'next step', taking industry professionals and visitors beyond FDA.GOV or the Food and Drug Administration Department. Where the Food and Drug Administration provides the regulations that creates the Laws that Pharmaceuticals, Biotechnology and other Regulated Industry must abide to, they lack in discussing or guiding the industry of the 'How' and 'Why' needed to comply.

FDA.COM is the 'next step', allowing industry to talk to industry concerning the 'How' and 'Why' of conformity and compliance concerning issues from every facet of the industry.

The Food and Drug Administration informs regulated industry that they must conform to 21 CFR Parts xxx, however, they don't tell industry how to comply or what is required to meet the regulations. Whether GMP, GCP, GLP, Validation, Clinical, Biotechnology, or other regulated industry, the FDA leaves it up to industry to decide the 'how' and then to implement, as they should. Industry must learn, and FDA.COM provides the forum for learning!
